З а п о м н и т е:

grown-up ['grəʊn'ʌp] n взрослый

drought [draʊt] n засуха disease [di'zi:z] n болезнь worry [wʌri] v беспокоиться

It seems like every day you hear something on radio or TV about air pollution, acid rain or global warming. There are also often stories about subjects like these in newspapers and magazines. On Earth Day thousands of people marched in big parades speaking about saving the Earth, and they were all on TV. What are these things, anyway? And if the grown-ups can't seem to do anything about it all, what can a child do?

Many of the problems came down to one simple thing: pollution. People are polluting the planet they live on. They are polluting the air and the land and the water.

A little pollution doesn't seem like such a bad thing. You see the smoke coming out of the car, and it goes up into the air and disappears. You finish painting a house and throw the brush cleaner down into the river and it's gone. So what's the big problem?

The big problem is that all these things build up. Global warming means that the gases from all the cars in the world stay in the air high above the Earth. Just like the glass on a greenhouse, these gases let the sun's light and heat in, but keep the Earth's heat from going back out into space. This makes the Earth's temperature rise, causing drought and making the oceans rise.

We throw away so much garbage that we are now short of places to put it. And acid rain caused by smoke from cars and power plants is harmful to plants and animals. Water pollution from toxic waste kills animals and causes disease in humans.

But if all the grown-ups and all the governments in the worlds in the world can just one child help save the Earth?

The answer is that everybody can help save the Earth. Every single person in the world can make a difference.

The people who are already working to save the Earth are of the opinion "Think globally, act locally." That means that you should worry about the Earth, but you're not expected to save the whole thing by yourself. All you have to do is clean up your part of it. If everyone helps save his own little parts of the Earth, then the Earth will be a much better place to live now — and forever.

What can you do? You need to think about the things that you and your family do that pollute the air and the water and the Earth. Then you need to find a way to avoid it. No one expects anyone to live without causing some pollution. We just need to stop causing so much that plants and animals and humans are harmed by it. The important thing is to get a lot closer to a cleaner planet.

You can help save the Earth by doing a lot of little things around the house. You probably won't be able to do each and every thing. Depending on where you live, some of them won't be possible, or won't be a problem in your house. Just do the best you can. Don't forget to tell your parents and your brothers and sisters what you're doing, and why it is important. And get them to help you, too.

It doesn't even have to cost money to help save the Earth. The things that you will do won't cost anything. Some will save money for you and your family. Recycling can even make you money.

But your biggest prize for doing the things talked about will be that you will help SAVE THE EARTH!

б) Прослушайте текст еще раз и в паузах ответьте на вопросы.
